Realigning Your Business Continuity and Pandemic Plans

At the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, many organisations found that the scope and premise of their business continuity plans were no longer adequate for dealing with the situation when federal and state governments began mandating lockdowns and movement restrictions. The pandemic has reset the expectations of business continuity.

The objective of this workshop is to examine the lessons identified from the on-going pandemic and outline the steps that organisations could take to realign their business continuity and pandemic plans to the new realities.

KEY TOPICS

- Understanding the pandemic stages as defined by the World Health Organisation and the Australian Government
- Key lessons and gaps identified in business continuity response to the on-going pandemic
- Understanding the BCM lifecycle and how it applies to the pandemic planning process
- Key elements of a pandemic plan – pre-incident preparation, response and recovery
 - ◇ Work health and safety
 - ◇ Workforce management
 - ◇ Communications
 - ◇ Education and awareness
- Alignment with the business continuity plan
 - ◇ People, infrastructure and supply chain
- Exercising and maintenance
 - ◇ Scenario planning and exercising the plans
 - ◇ Keeping the pandemic and business continuity plans current and aligned
